In Culture in a Liquid Modern World, renowned Polish sociologist Zygmunt Bauman offers insightful meditations on the devolution of culture from tool for the cultivation of human potential to insipid product of base consumerism. This devolution is fueled, Bauman argues, by the same untethered global market forces that tear people from their places of origin, spitting them out as migrants far from home with no chance of return.

Rachel Green on "Culture in a Liquid Modern World" | E3W ...

Zygmunt Bauman, who introduced the idea of liquid modernity, wrote that its characteristics are about the individual, namely increasing feelings of uncertainty and the privatization of ambivalence. It is a kind of chaotic continuation of modernity, where a person can shift from one social position to another in a fluid manner. Nomadism becomes a general trait of the "liquid modern" man as he flows through his own life like a tourist, changing places, jobs, spouses, values, and sometimes more ...
