The manual was a one or 2 sheet pamphlet with mostly safety information. I believe DBI books still sells inexpensive paperbacks on shotgun, rifle, and pistol assembly-disassembly if you want a manual. The NRA also has publications on guns which I'm sure would include the 311 stevens which is the same gun as far as I could tell.

I like shotguns, I mean I like them a lot. I own dozens, but this is my only double barrel shotgun. I purchased this Springfield Savage 511 for 30 bucks at a Flea Market and it was covered in several layers of spray paint. Lots of layers of paint. I took it with almost no idea if it would work, but a 30 dollar wall hanger was worth it.

I just bought a Stevens 315 "Trade Brand Name" shotgun marked "Cumberland Arms". From the excellent info I recieved on this gun, posted in "Gun ID and Value" on this forum,,,I think I can hazard a good guess about the Stevens 511 origins. In the beginning, Savage was a rifle company, who made high dollar Savage 99 rifles.

FWIW, my 511 was a 20 gauge. 26" barrels, choked modified /full and could accept 3" shells. I never took that gun apart, so I don't know anything about the spring in the forearm, but the exploded view I posted eariler seems to show somekind of coil spring over a rod in the area of the forearm.

That shotgun of my grandfather's was a Stevens 311A in 16 gauge built in 1951. A true classic American side by side and quite popular, since back then a side by side was the shotgun for the common man. The 311A was just one example of a family of double barrels that Stevens made from 1877 to 1988.
